► Johnston says he's touched to have opportunity
► Starts this fall after after current Gov. Gen.

University of Waterloo president David Johnston was announced as Canada's next governor general by the Queen and the prime minister yesterday.

"My wife and I have always believed that service — whether it is to family, community, university or country — is our highest calling."

The bilingual academic starts his new job this fall, Prime Minister Stephen Harper said in a statement.

"David Johnston represents the best of Canada," Harper said. "He represents hard work, dedication, public service and humility."

"I am confident he will continue to embody these traits in his new role as the Crown's representative in Canada."

Johnston, 69, was selected by an advisory group of constitutional experts assembled by Harper. The group was designed to make the appointment less political, said PMO spokesman Dimitri Soudas.

It consulted hundreds of people over several weeks and Johnston — a constitutional expert in a time of successive minority governments — quickly came to the fore, Soudas said.

The academic and prolific author is widely respected and has had numerous interactions with government.

He wrote the terms of reference for the Oliphant inquiry, which examined former prime minister Brian Mulroney's business dealings with German-Canadian arms dealer Karlheinz Schreiber.

Johnston said as an academic he's witnessed Canadians' "creativity and ingenuity, our strong ties to our communities and to the world, as well as our diversity and our vitality."

"The opportunity to see these values at work across the country means a great deal to me."

Alternating between English and a laboured French, he called the office of the governor general "an important institution."

He said he particularly looks forward to meeting service men and women in his role as commander-in-chief of the Canadian Forces.

Campaign fights water market

Allowing private companies the right to sell off water from Alberta's lakes and streams could force towns and cities like Edmonton to spend millions just to provide enough water to its own residents, says a group behind a new campaign.

Shelia Muxlow, a director with the Sierra Club, is among those heading up the "Our Water is Not For Sale" campaign and she says the proposed plan by the Stelmach government could have a huge impact on Alberta's rivers, lakes and streams.

"If water markets go forward as proposed, nature will be forced to act as one more player in the market competing with other water users," said Muxlow.

"We all need water to survive and it should not be allocated based on who has the biggest bank account."

Cara Tobin, a spokeswoman with the province's Environment Ministry, says each company looking to sell water will go through a rigorous application process and it won't be allowed to ship water outside of Alberta if the plan is approved.

There are also plans to set aside a certain amount of water to protect the environment, says Tobin.

But Edmonton Coun. Linda Sloan says city taxpayers could be on the hook for millions if the plan is approved. "This places municipalities and citizens in a vulnerable position," she said. JEFF CUMMINGS

ANDREAS MORSE

One proud Edmontonian is revving his engines in anticipation of the Capital Ex Parade and Honda Indy race in just a few weeks.

Northlands president Ken Knowles on Thursday announced Olympic curling champ Kevin Martin as the honorary grand marshal for this year's Capital Ex Parade and the Honda Indy Edmonton.

"It's very much an honour to be here as the marshal," Martin said. "I was always in awe of those first few cars (in the parade) when I was a kid. I couldn't wait to see the Eskimos and for some reason, the premier is someone I really wanted to see, and now, all these years later, to be in that first car is pretty cool."

community and the music industry here in Edmonton."

SOSFest will feature bands like Ten Second Epic, Souljah Fyah, and Captain Tractor. Proceeds from the festival will support the Alberta Music Education Foundation and War Child Canada.

The party starts Friday at 7 p.m. and the sweet, summer sounds continue all weekend long, wrapping up with a Sunday street party on Whyte Avenue.

HARRY HODGE
@METRONEWS.CA

One of the concert events of the summer is only a week away in Edmonton.

Commonwealth Stadium will host two of the biggest names in rock music when Bon Jovi and Kid Rock tear up the stage next Thursday.

Bon Jovi has become known for writing several rock anthems, and achieved widespread recognition with their third album Slippery When Wet, released in 1986. Bon Jovi is well known for songs like Livin' on a Prayer, which has become its signature song, as well as You Give Love a Bad Name, Wanted Dead or Alive, It's My Life, and Have a Nice Day.

Singer-songwriter and rapper Kid Rock has notched five Grammy Award nominations. Some of his best-known albums are Devil Without a Cause, The History of Rock, Live Trucker and Rock N Roll Jesus.

Getting there

Here's what fans need to know to get to the show and make it safe and enjoyable for everyone:

- Transportation Take Edmonton Transit (ETS) to and from the concert as parking restrictions will be in effect around the stadium. ETS Park & Ride service will be available at the six regular locations, and LRT services will be increased to meet demand.
- Access for disabled Commonwealth Stadium is wheelchair accessible at Gates 2, 6 and 11. DATS drop-off is available at Gates 2 and 6, as well as covered spectator spaces for wheelchair users and an attendant. An elevator is available at Gate 11.
- Tix Get tickets through Ticketmaster by calling 780-451-8000, or visiting www.ticketmaster.ca. Tickets will be available at three Commonwealth Stadium box offices (Gates 6, 9 and 13) on the day of the concert.

Panhandling plan gets mixed reviews

Some services that help Edmonton's homeless are giving a planned provincial program to curb panhandling mixed reviews.

The program would be modelled on one in Denver where people would put money into donation receptacles that resemble parking meters.

Change inside the meters would then go to the Homeless Foundation and other support organizations like the Bissell Centre and Hope Mission.

Kelly Row, a community relations co-ordinator with Hope Mission, says the move would provide a "much-needed" revenue stream for the charity that could help it support people with addictions and mental health issues.

The move would also deter people from giving money to panhandlers.

"Every little bit helps," said Row. "Some of these (panhandlers) are making hundreds of dollars a day."

But Jessica Smith-Perry, a spokeswoman with the city's Bissell Centre, says the machines should be more about helping the homeless instead of campaigning against panhandling.

A similar program was launched in Edmonton nine years ago and it was "quite a burden" for charities, she said.

Smith-Perry says homeless services was be in charge of taking the money out of the devices, and it became highly ineffective.

"Panhandling is not a public issue — aggressive panhandling is," said Smith-Perry.

KEYSTONE XL PROJECT

Stelmach hits back at critics

Premier Ed Stelmach is defending a proposed oil-sands pipeline that's getting bashed by critics on both sides of the border.

Stelmach has written a letter to U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton in support of the proposed $12-billion Keystone XL project.

The pipeline would carry bitumen from Alberta straight to the U.S. In the letter, Stelmach says that the U.S. needs secure supplies of oil and natural gas. He also says it's important the supplies come from jurisdictions such as Alberta that take their environmental responsibilities seriously.

This comes after up to 50 congressmen sent a letter to Clinton expressing environmental concerns about the oilsands and the pipeline.

When Lucia Nzunkulu was three years old, her mother tired of her and abandoned her at her father's house.

But he didn't want her either.

That was the best thing that could have happened to Lucia, now 14.

"My father had a new family and wanted nothing to do with us," she explained. "He didn't care if we ate or not."

Lucia and her three-week-old brother ended up at Agape, an orphanage in KwaZulu-Natal, South Africa, that provides food, shelter and education for some 50 children.

"This is where I belong," said Lucia. "The people here won't dump me like my mother, who said she'd come back but didn't. People ask, 'How's your orphanage?' I say, 'You mean my home, right?'"

Perhaps more unusually, Agape provides music.

In fact, the children have become such accomplished singers that they're the subject of an award-winning documentary, We Are Together.

"Music is central to the orphanage," said filmmaker Paul Taylor, who is a trustee of the Rise Foundation, which he founded after making the film, to support the Agape children's education.

"The children have beautiful voices, but Agape's focus on music isn't just about performing. Music is therapeutic to the children."

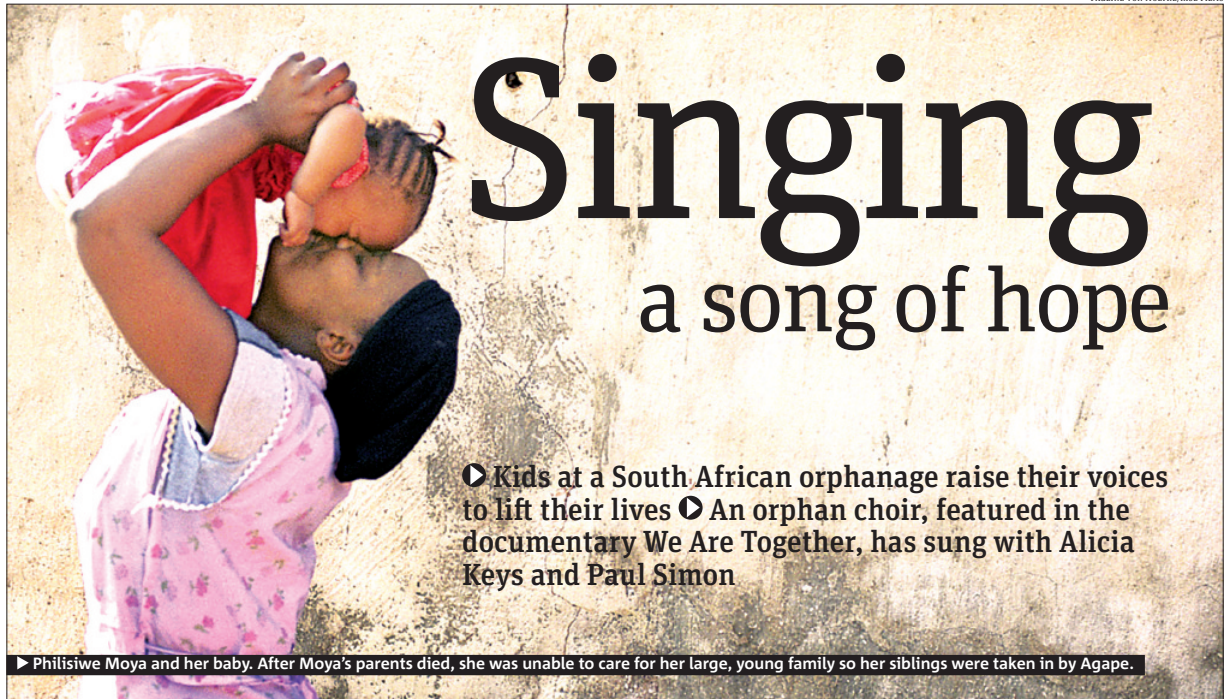

Lucia already knows that singing has changed her life.

"When I joined the choir I knew nothing about music," she said.

"But South Africans like to sing, and at Agape we sing before we eat and before we pray. Thanks to the choir, I've been to both London and New York."

Thanks to Agape, Lucia can allow herself to think about the future.

A relief well being drilled deep into the seafloor of the Gulf of Mexico to shut down the gushing well could be completed ahead of a long-set deadline of mid-August only if condi-

Caper latest knock on passport security

An alleged spy who disappeared after being freed on bail in Cyprus assumed the identity of a dead five-year-old Canadian boy to obtain a passport, raising fresh questions about travel document security.

The apparent abuse of the Canadian passport system by Christopher Metsos underscores a persistent gap that has long prevented federal officials from easily verifying the data on birth and citizenship certificates, commonly used by applicants to obtain passports.

Solon Savva, deputy chief of mission at the Cypriot High Commission to Canada, confirmed statements from the Mediterranean island's justice minister that Metsos, 54, held "a valid, genuine Canadian passport" obtained using the identity of a Canadian who died at age five.

Metsos is among 11 people — four of whom claim to be Canadian — indicted on charges of conspiring to act as secret agents in the United States on behalf of the Russian Federation.

Canadian economy still on track: IMF

► Our growth remains ahead of the U.S. ► IMF predicts slower growth worldwide in 2011

3.6%

The IMF's prediction for Canada's growth rate this year. In contrast, the U.S. growth projection for this year is 3.3 per cent.

Canada's economy is on track to grow more quickly this year than previously expected, putting it ahead of most other advanced economies, according to new estimates from the International Monetary Fund.

The IMF said yesterday it's raising the 2010 growth forecast for Canada to 3.6 per cent from its previous estimate of 3.1 per cent, issued in April.

The IMF's July report also raised its U.S. growth estimate to 3.3 per cent, up from 3.1 per cent, and its world estimate to 4.6 per cent from 4.2 per cent.

Asian countries with rapidly maturing economies will grow more quickly than the United States, Japan and European countries that have historically been more advanced.

China's growth for this year, for instance, is now projected at 10.5 per cent, up five percentage points, while the IMF expects India's economy will advance 9.4 per cent this year (up six percentage points from the April projection.)

Next year isn't looking so rosy for Canada, however. The IMF has lowered its projection for 2011 growth by four percentage points to 2.8 per cent. Also notable was a reduction in the IMF's 2011 projection for China, which has been reduced by three percentage points from April's.

The IMF, a Washington-based multinational organization affiliated with the United Nations and the World Bank, said Europe's debt crisis might stall the global rebound and governments need to shore up shaky public confidence.

Its quarterly World Economic Outlook warned Europe has to quickly resolve debt problems.

U.S. court again rejects ban on offshore drilling

► Government wanted a ban while legal fight continues ► Decision a setback for Obama administration

A U.S. federal appeals court on Thursday rejected the federal government's effort to restore an offshore deepwater oil drilling moratorium, opening the door to resumed drilling in the Gulf while the legal fight continues.

A three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled soon after an afternoon hearing in a lawsuit filed by companies that oppose the drilling ban.

The Interior Department argued the moratorium was necessary while it studied deepwater drilling risks in the wake of the BP oil spill. Government lawyers asked the appeals court to let the temporary drilling ban stand until the 5th Circuit ruled on their appeal of the lower-court ruling.

Lawyers for several oil-field service companies that sued to block the moratorium, said the Obama administration has failed to show that the government would suffer "irreparable harm" if the drilling ban is lifted.

5 MINUTES WITH: DAVID WARAWA

David Warawa is a local artist doing stained glass art out of Shylar Studio in McKernan. Most notable are his windows in the Misericordia Hospital, St. Agnes Parish, and Gros Morne National Park, where he created an iceberg made entirely out of glass.

What style of stained glass art do you practise?

I'm an experimental glass artist working with special techniques blending different techniques together to create art forms that are new and original.

What's it like being a stained glass artist in Edmonton?

I think it's difficult in Western Canada and in Edmonton because people aren't particularly familiar with what expressions and forms glass can take. They might know more about sculpture and painting but I don't think they know an awful lot about new, innovative, experimental glass. That would be something you would find more in Sweden or Venice or the United States, but not Edmonton, Alta.

What are you working on right now?

Right now I'm working on a commission for Blackjacks Road House in "Every piece in the whole process of 30 years of development has been the culmination of the time that came before it."

Nisku. It depicts the history of the oilfield in this area from the great boom in 1947 when Leduc No. 1 came in. So it's more of a traditional, stained glass panel arrangement as you would see, but my work has branched into the three-dimensional, sculptural, carved and fused form.

What is your favourite piece you've ever created?

After much deliberation and contemplation and argument in my own mind, it is like picking a favourite child. Every piece in the whole process of 30 years of development has been the culmination of the time that came before it. At that moment in time, every piece was the greatest piece that could be done. And to move to the next step only made the next piece the greatest to be done. ● ANDREAS MORSE ► Details are still vague but Inception is apparently a heist film in which corporate spies use dreams to steal information.

Inside the top-secret world of Inception

► Actor Cillian Murphy spills the beans on director Christopher Nolan's new thriller ► Gag order was necessary for keeping film fresh for viewers

NED

METRO WORLD NEWS IN LOS ANGELES

Cillian Murphy's been keeping quiet for quite some time, and he's glad his gag order is being lifted.

As part of the cast of Christopher Nolan's mysterious Inception, Murphy has maintaining radio silence while the film was shot and completed, but it wasn't like he and his castmates were exactly forced into secrecy.

"It was quite laidback, really. Warner didn't make us sign stuff. It was just Chris," he tells Metro.

"Chris is quite old-fashioned in many ways as a filmmaker, in his execution of the films," the Irish actor explains.

"He's very keen that people experience a film as freshly as possible. There's such an insatiable demand right now for information and for knowing stuff and plot points and everything immediately. And I think it has taken away a little bit from the enjoyment of seeing a film."

And beyond a desire to be old-fashioned, Murphy admits the twisty nature of Inception made such secrecy necessary.

"I think it was essential

"What's great about Chris is that he presupposes a level of intelligence in the audience. And I think audiences are grateful for that."

CILLIAN MURPHY ON

for a film like this, which is so high-concept and unique, that we kept as much as possible under wraps," he says. "But it is nice to be able to actually talk about your character."

Of course even now, it's tough to talk about his character without giving too much away.

To put it vaguely, Inception is a heist film in which corporate spies use dreams to steal information. Needless to say, it wasn't like anything Murphy had read before.

"I think we've all been reassured that every actor had the same reaction to reading it," he says.

"You feel a little bit dumb when you read it. Because it's so visual, and reading that cold on a page as stage directions, it's very hard to keep track of what's going on."

Murphy on his co-stars

Ellen Page: "She's so funny. We started in London, and she was like, 'What am I doing here? This is just a boys' club. All these guys in suits with guns.' But then you see the movie and she's phenomenal."

Leonardo DiCaprio: "For any actor of my generation, to get to work with Leonardo DiCaprio is a real privilege. That was just such a kick for me."

► Nicolas Cage

Cage takes surprising turn in family flick

CHRIS
SCENE@METRONWS.CA

Only an actor with the unapologetic chutzpah that Nicolas Cage has would (and could) rebound from a lead role in an R-rated Werner Herzog movie to star in a Disney summer blockbuster.

In last year's blisteringly naughty Bad Lieutenant: Port of Call New Orleans, Cage played a drug addicted wreck of a cop.

The turn was a classic Cage freak-out, which is why many fans of that film might question his appearance in kid-friendly The Sorcerer's Apprentice, opening wide next week.

"I did the movie because I believe in family entertainment," Cage said. "I can do a film with Bad Lieutenant and I love it, but I also love being able to defy expectations and more importantly, to be a part of a film that parents can take their children to, that serves as an event, something that the whole family can experience together and have fun with."

The Sorcerer's Apprentice sees Cage essaying the role of ancient Merlin disciple Balthazar, who, while battling his arch nemesis (Alfred Molina) in New York City, ends up teaming up with a young science nerd (Jay Baruchel), teaching him the art of wizardry.

Swedes on Fire

The Girl Who Played With FireGenre: ThrillerDirector: Daniel AlfredssonStars: Noomi Rapace

The Girl Who Played With Fire is to The Girl With The Dragon Tattoo what Hannibal was to Silence of the Lambs. And that's subjective praise because this critic thought Hannibal was in many ways a superior and bolder film.

It was certainly a different animal. Like Hannibal, the film takes the personal relationships of the characters we love from the first picture and betrays our expectations, going that extra mile into baroque, almost Ian Fleming-esque horror show, functioning not only as an intimate psychological mystery but a dynamite, visceral pulp fiction romp as well.

Noomi Rapace returns as the androgynous, bisexual Lisbeth Salander, the boldest, baddest female heroine the big screen has ever seen as does Dragon's Micheal Nyqvist as legendary, ruthless reporter Michael Blomkvist in a tale that picks up approximately one year after the first film's events.

Lisbeth — now wealthy due to her heroic embezzlement in the last chapter — returns to Stockholm and almost immediately is thrust deep into another nightmare world of murder and family secrets that this time, are directly linked to her sordid past.

It's riveting watching these two obsessed and irrevocably linked-by-fate characters (and former lovers) work within the same narrative together while rarely sharing any screen time together. It's hypnotic.

Director Daniel Alfredsson brings a kinetic energy to the narrative that honors the labyrinthine text while rampaging brilliantly on its own merits and he amplifies the eroticism too. There's also the expected ultraviolence. But like the first picture, none of this sensationalism is ever exploitive. CHRIS ALEXANDER

If you (or your child) was charmed by Pixar's superhero movie The Incredibles, then you're sure to find Despicable Me a remarkably satisfying companion piece. Despicable Me focuses on supervillain Gru (brilliantly voiced by Steve Carell) who finds himself the head of a household. The movie's driven approach and witty gags will ensure that it charms even the most diabolical soul.

STEVE GOW/FOR METRO CANADAPredators*Genre: Sci-fi/ActionDirector: Nimrod AntalStars: Adrien Brody

The smartest thing Nimrod Antal's Predators does is ignore three out of the four films in the franchise's history. While the 1987 original, starring Arnold Schwarzenegger, is a pulpy, goofy classic, the same can't be said of the subsequent movies, including the 1990 sequel starring Danny Glover. While a definite improvement over the previous three, the latest instalment takes itself too seriously to be very much fun.

NED ERHBAR/METRO WORLD NEWSCyrus*Genre: ComedyDirector: Jay DuplassStars: John C. Reilly

The premise of Cyrus is a familiar one — man comes into single mom's life; single mom's son is not too happy. However, in Cyrus, the son turns out to be an off-kilter, 21-year-old wannabe new-age musician who has the social graces of a lobotomized sloth, meaning their version of this plot line might be most real — and hilariously creepy — yet. It's John C. Reilly who makes the film. It's that realness that lends his performances honest credibility in Cyrus.

SUPERVILLAINS: EVIL GENIUSES GIVE HEROES A REASON FOR BEING

InFocus

SCENE@METRONews.CA

Sometimes they are diabolical. Occasionally dastardly. They are, of course, supervillains, the evil geniuses who give Superman, Batman and other caped crusaders a reason to get up in the morning.

Supervillains like Professor Moriarty and Dr. Fu Manchu, with their craving for world domination and habit of calling everyone around them "Fools!" have been scaring moviegoers for decades, but the Professor and the Doctor are rather conventional compared to the Lightning from the 1938 film The Fighting Devil Dogs.

Lightning was the first crime mastermind to wear a wild costume — a black shiny helmet and robe that later inspired Darth Vader's uniform — and he set the tone for hundreds of cinematic supervillains.

In this weekend's Despicable Me, a new super-villain, Gru (Steve Carell), rethinks his plan to steal the moon after becoming a dad. It's a comedic take on the standard baddie, but nonetheless Gru has most of the accoutrements of his evil trade.

Here's a checklist:

Accent: Having a sinister accent is par for the super-villain course. Gru's sounds like a cross between Ricardo Montalban and Bela Lugosi, but he is just the latest in a long line of baddies with a brogue. Who could forget Batman & Robin's icy Mr. Freeze? Played by Arnold Schwarzenegger, the frosty bad guy intoned, "The Ice Man cometh!" in a menacing accent that sounded a lot like, well, Schwarzenegger.

Doomsday Devices: What's an evil overlord without a diabolical device of destruction? Gru has an arsenal of shrink and freeze rays, but those pale by comparison to Doctor Otto Octavius (Alfred Molina) and his Spider-Man 2 explosive super-weapon or the Green Goblin's Pumpkin Bombs — Jack-o'-lanterns that can melt through a three-inch-thick sheet of steel.

Catchphrase: All good supervillains have a motto. Gru could learn a thing or two from the Clown Prince of Crime, the Joker (Jack Nicholson) who cackled, "Have you ever danced with the devil in the pale moonlight?" to his victims before offing them. It's catchy, but not as memorable as Mr. J's other well known quote, "This town needs an enema." Even better is Terence Stamp's haughty command "Kneel before Zod!" from Superman II.

A.K.A.: Finally, Gru fits the baddie bill but does fall down in one aspect of supervillainy, however; no evil nickname. Perhaps he could take his lead from the Joker a.k.a. "the Harlequin of Hate" and go by the Fiend of Fatherhood.

Minogue says just dance

► Singer regrets not writing about breast cancer battle ► says new album was made for the dancefloor

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

When most musicians deal with something traumatic they often end up writing about it.

Not Kylie Minogue. About five years ago the Aussie songstress was diagnosed with breast cancer — it's been in remission since 2006 — and she has yet to record an album about the experience. It's something she regrets.

"I did write some tracks for X (her 2007 disc) about my experience, but I didn't include them on the album," she tell Metro over the phone from New York. "The consensus was that they didn't belong on it."

She says she wished she "had the energy to fight" and that she had more

"How do I do it all? I don't know. I just keep going until I need to shut the door and close my eyes." KYLIE MINOGUE confidence to get the songs on the record. But her new album, Aphrodite, doesn't discuss her cancer either. "It's not the moment," she says, adding that she does want to create an "anti-album," one that does have the songs she thinks her fans want to hear.

Instead, the electro, club-ready Aphrodite deals with love, but she steers clear from the heartache she's dealt with throughout much of her life. "And if I lie with you long enough I can see the things I'm dreaming of,"

she sings on the upbeat Everything is Beautiful. Positive lyrics like that are all over the record.

"I still believe in love," she says. "Not just with one person, but I feel it with my audience and feel it through my music."

While this disc is made for the dance floor, it wasn't supposed to turn out like it did. She wanted to create something with more guitars than keys. "It was supposed to be more organic," she reveals.

But, as the writing process went on she began feeling lost. "I became very confused," she says. "I didn't know what I was trying to achieve."

Her songwriters shifted gears, creating the keyboard heavy sound that's on her new effort. She's thrilled with overall result, and adds that the timing for a dance record couldn't have been better.

"Dance has infiltrated the mainstream in Europe," she says. "That sound worked for me and it was good timing."

Rise of a pop star

Kylie Minogue has never been more popular than she is now, but she's far from an overnight success. Here's a quick recap of her long career:

- 1987: Minogue sings a re-make of Locomotion and is suddenly a star
- 1988: Locomotion helped propel her self-titled debut to #1 on the U.K. charts.
- 1991: Minogue's fourth record, Let's Get To It, was her first disc not to crack the British top 10.
- 2005: She's diagnosed with breast cancer and cancels her popular Showgirl tour.
- 2008: Her "comeback album" and 10th disc X tops Australian charts.
- 2009: Tours North America for the first time.

"A POWERFUL, ACTION-PACKED, EXCITING FAMILY FILM."

► 3OH!3 are back with a new album called Streets of Gold

Keeping it uncomplicated

► 3OH!3 set out to write songs that are fun to make and perform

CAM LINDSAY
SCENE@METRONews.CA

In an age where Lady Gaga tries to pass herself off as high art, it's nice to see that some artists can accept the fact that they're simply in it to have a good time.

3OH!3, for instance, aren't afraid to admit their M.O. is pretty uncomplicated.

"We have always set out to make music that is 'fun,'" admits the towering Nathaniel Motte. "We want our songs to be fun to make, fun to perform and listen to. If some of those songs are applicable to a party atmosphere, then that's wonderful!"

After selling a few million downloads from 2008's WANT, Motte and partner Sean Foreman applied some newfound skills towards making their second album, Streets of Gold.

"We set out initially as a band wanting to make fun, catchy music that was a bit different and perhaps a bit edgy," Motte explains.

3OH!3 haven't abandoned their bread and butter. Streets of Gold is primarily more of the same hook-crammed, synthesize party jams, but Motte has a problem with those who write his band off as

"soulless frat boys" that don't have "anything to say about anything."

"Streets of Gold was a vitally important step for us, to hopefully establish ourselves as a long-staying and pertinent band."

While they might reach the charts with a song like My First Kiss featuring pal Ke$ha, Motte says a song like I'm Not the One came from a deep place.

"Sean wrote the lyrics about a close relative, and a medical condition they have been living with for a while," he says. "Instrumentally, I wanted to combine both organic instrumentation and electronic elements. I think that song was a great release for us."

► Enrique Iglesias

Iglesias releases first bilingual CD

Enrique Iglesias has always lived a bilingual life, but musically, his English and Spanish worlds remained separate.

The Latin heartthrob would release an album to satisfy his Spanish-speaking fans, and then another for the English pop world. But this week, with the release of Eurphoria, he has finally combined both for the first bilingual album in his 15 year-old career.

"This album has everything. Is undoubtedly the most eclectic album I have ever done," Iglesias said. "I didn't plan it to be this way, but I think that mostly, when you have both languages, when you have collaborations with artist of genres totally different from those I have done, that has made the album to be so diverse musically."

Iglesias, 35, was born in Madrid and raised in Miami. "I was raised speaking 'Spanglish.' I have always written in English and in Spanish, I think in English and in Spanish, I dream in English and in Spanish."

WHY THE POLARIS PRIZE MATTERS

Sound Check

ALAN CROSS

SCENE@METRONOWS.CA

The Polaris Music Prize makes people mad. It starts endless arguments and divides people into bitter camps which lob ugly invectives at each other, impugning the enemy's taste and artistic sensibilities. But that's the whole point.

The Polaris winner gets $20,000 for providing the best full-length Canadian album of the year.

Getting to a winner is as complicated as electing a pope — and filled with nearly as much intrigue. Over the course of many months, nearly 200 music journalists, broadcasters, bloggers, critics and general tastemakers weigh in with which albums they think should be considered.

In June, votes are cast to whittle dozens of suggestions down to the 40-album Long List. Tuesday, the results of a second vote were announced, resulting in the 10-album Short List. In September, a jury will be sequestered to debate the artistic qualities of each finalist to determine the winner.

With something set up to be so subjective, you can see where the fights begin. But at least Polaris gets people talking about music. Artists and albums that might otherwise forever remain obscure are discussed and heard, not only domestically but internationally. In an era when far too many people shut themselves off to unfamiliar or disagreeable sounds with ear bud, anything that gets anyone to interact over the artistic qualities of music is a good thing.

Wolf Parade feast on fresh sounds

► Band returns with boundless energy and layers of instrumentation

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
SCENE@METRONOWS.CA

Wolf Parade fans should be thrilled that the Montreal-based band has a new record out — it was far from certain that it would happen. "I think we always wanted to do another record," says drummer Arlen Thompson, "but after we finished our last tour it was up in the air."

It's not that the band didn't want to keep making music together, they're just so busy with other projects (see sidebar). Putting together Expo 86, the band's third disc, could only happen when singers Dan Boeckner and Spencer Krug had time, and they had to record it fast.

"We figured out that we can get a record done in four months from writing to have it mastered," says Thompson. That speed means the group can play with other bands, and still fit in Wolf Parade. "It's always something we can come back to."

Fortunately, quality wasn't sacrificed for speed. The record isn't a major departure from their first two records — it's boundless energy and layers of instrumentation remain, but it sounds more organic and more free flowing.

"It's just the sound of us playing together and not letting the process of making a record get too much in the way," says Thompson. It may also be that Wolf Parade is now free from expectations. While people still want to hear what the group creates, with their other projects getting more attention, and five years between this disc and their first, overhyped album Apologies to the Queen Mary, the band can finally be themselves.

Lone wolves

There's no such thing as down time for the members of Wolf Parade. Here's what they're up to when not playing together.

- Dan Boeckner: Boeckner and his wife started synth-rock duo Handsome Furs in 2007. Since then they've toured the world, scored a Juno nom and were short-listed for the Polaris Prize.
- Spencer Krug: Guitarist and vocalist Spencer Krug has a number of bands under his belt. He fronts indie rockers Sunset Rubdown and plays in Swan Lake & Frog Eye.
- Arlen Thompson: When Thompson's not drumming for Wolf Parade he's recording other acts including Handsome Furs, Sunset Rubdown, We Are Wolves and Omnikrom.
- Dante Decarlo: Decarlo officially joined the band in 2008 after playing with Hot Hot Heat.

"We've realized that we do what we do and we hope people like the music and how we're moving forward," he says. "We don't worry about making a record as good as Apologies."

Playing a character with a lost past in the new series Haven was a bit of a challenge — but an interesting one — for Emily Rose. "It's literally like telling me to play a boy, because it's something I don't know," says the actress. "One of the reasons I get to do a lot of the things I do is that I have a solid family base."

In the series, which premieres Monday night, Rose plays FBI agent Audrey Parker, a woman with a mysterious past who is sent to the small Maine town of Haven on a routine investigation.

She soon discovers the town is a refuge for people with

Norton lifting the crowd

► Celeb's website crowdrise.com combining social networking and charity to bring attention to causes

ELISABETH BRAW
NEWS@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN LONDON

First Fight Club, now internet do-gooder. Ed Norton, famous for his intelligent performances in roles ranging from reformed neo-Nazi to hardened police officer, spends a large chunk of his time volunteering for good causes.

Now Norton, who once persuaded fellow celebrities to run a marathon with him in order to raise money for Africa, borrows a page from Silicon Valley.

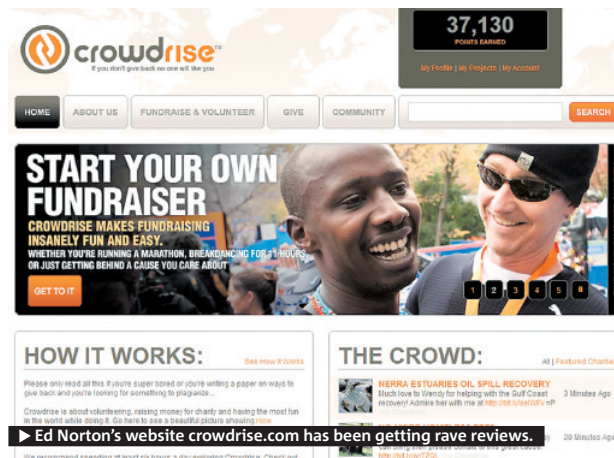

His new website, Crowdrise.com, allows users to network and donate money to their friends' charitable causes.

You're trying to harness people's generosity through Crowdrise. What's your inspiration?

It grew out of a conversation I had with the three friends who eventually launched Crowdrise with me.

We talked about the fact that the tools of social networking weren't being used as effectively as they could be.

And I had noticed that charities that were raising money the traditional way just weren't getting enough money.

What's your benchmark for success?

We're working on lots of different models for how we'll measure success. But essentially, I want Crowdrise to be the place people go to when they want to raise or donate money. I don't want it to be seen as Ed Norton's website, or a website run by a celebrity, but as a website that's the best at what it does.

I'm very excited that we're already getting a lot of positive comments from people in Silicon Valley.

A number of celebrities, I have already joined Crowdrise in order to mobilize their fans for their causes. Why are celebrities a good means of getting people involved with charitable causes?

People don't need celebrities to get involved with charitable causes, but for celebrities who're already involved and want a way for their fans to do something, too, this is a good way. The same thing goes for regular people; everyone can encourage their friends to donate. It's just nice to see that people you admire are doing something good.

CANADIANS

Short, O'Hara get noms

SCTV alums Martin Short and Catherine O'Hara are among the Canadians up for trophies at next month's Emmy Awards. The comedians are each up for dramatic supporting roles.

Short is up for his turn as the scheming lawyer Leonard Winstone on the FX serial Damages, which aired on Showcase in Canada. O'Hara was recognized for her part as the kindly Aunt Ann in the miniseries Temple Grandin, which aired on HBO Canada.

Toronto-born director Jeremy Podeswa is up for outstanding directing for a miniseries for his work on the Steven Spielberg war epic, The Pacific, along with U.S. co-director David Nutter.

Emmy Awards chalk full of Glee this year

► January Jones was nominated for an Emmy for best actress in a drama series for her role in Mad Men. The show garnered 17 nominations in all.

Glee, the spunky TV musical comedy about high school misfits and the teachers who shepherd them, was a top Emmy nominee Thursday with 19 bids, including for best comedy series and stars Matthew Morrison and Lea Michele.

"I'm in such shock," Michele said from New York.

The leading nominee was the gritty, unsparing World War II drama, The Pacific, with 24 nominations. But the miniseries, produced by Steven Spielberg and Tom Hanks as a companion to their acclaimed Band of Brothers, failed to produce the same buzz as its European theatre of war predecessor.

All by herself? No cellmate for Lohan

► Convicted actress also takes to her Twitter account to make cryptic references about human rights abuses and her alleged victimhood

When Lindsay Lohan heads to jail later this month, she'll be getting a lot of alone time. "She's getting a cell by herself," a rep for the L.A. County Sheriff's Office tells the New York Daily News. "She will be separated from the general population. She will be in a pod with other inmates in the same classification." Lohan is understandably none too thrilled about her sentence. She took to her Twitter account to ominously post, "It is clearly stated in Article 5 of the U.N. Universal Declaration of Human Rights that, 'No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment,'" though it's unclear what punishment the actress was referring to. However, media gossip website Gawker speculates she's drawing parallels between herself and Sakineh Mohammadi Ashtiani, an Iranian woman sentenced to death by stoning for allegedly committing adultery. The Mean Girls star linked to a Newsweek article about the case, in a veiled reference to her own situation.

As for her relationship with Yankees slugger Alex Rodriguez, Diaz is playing coy, saying only, "I grew up with the Dodgers, but now I'm a Yankees fan." ● METRO WORLD

Classic Cup final?

► Both teams have chance to earn their first World Cup championship

SPAIN

NETHERLANDS

A new champion will be crowned at the World Cup on Sunday, when Spain meets the Netherlands in a final which has the potential to be a classic.

Well-organized and experienced but blessed with finesse and flair, Spain has the roster to outplay any team in the world.

The Dutch have forwards, wingers and midfielders capable of slicing through any defence.

The first World Cup final to be staged in Africa should be a memorable one if both teams bring their best game to Soccer City on Sunday (CBC, 12 p.m. MT).

Although some of its stars looked short of fitness and form in the early stages, Spain produced its best performance in Wednesday's 1-0 semifinal victory over Germany. It looked more like the squad that brushed teams aside to win the European Championship two years ago.

Although the Netherlands too has won a European title, that was back in 1988 and this is its first World Cup final since '78 — when it lost to Argentina in Buenos Aires.

"It's quite something to have achieved this after 32 years," coach Bert van Marwijk said. "That only really sank in right at the end of the match when I was sitting there on the bench. But we can't stop here. We have one more match to go."

Sneijder looks to add to trophy rack

Nowadays, success comes at such a staggering pace for Wesley Sneijder that he can't even find a spot in his agenda to properly enjoy it.

After leading Inter Milan to a triple of titles the Dutch playmaker now has a shot at an unheard-of quadruple in Sunday's World Cup final against Spain.

No European has ever done it before.

Sneijder won the Italian Cup May 5, added the Serie A title May 16 and the Champions League trophy May 22.

Now, he could add the World Cup Sunday, making for the most productive spell in European soccer history.

"They don't even give you time to think about it," Sneijder said. "Afterward, I'll have time enough to enjoy it. Now it doesn't really enter my mind."

In a tumultuous season, Sneijder is still in the running for the World Cup top-scoring title, tied at five goals with Spain's David

"You have to lust after goals. You have to feel great about yourself and then luck comes your way."

WESLEY SNEIJDER

Villa. That competition could also turn in his favour Sunday.

And to think that only in August, Real Madrid's biggest wish was to dump him on the transfer market after deeming him not good enough for the Spanish powerhouse.

Inter Milan realized he was a bargain, and coach Jose Mourinho has long been known to recognize genius. Sneijder has been splitting defences all year with pinpoint passes and changed matches with his free kicks. All of a sudden, instead of looking at a glum future, everything turned out perfectly.

He had always said that at 26, his career should hit its full stride. He turned 26 two days before the World Cup started.

Airport brass apologizes

AIR TRAVEL. Airport management has apologized for the diverted flights that resulted in hundreds of World Cup fans missing the Spain-Germany semifinal in Durban, South Africa. Airports Company South Africa said on Thursday it was investigating how six scheduled flights could not land at King Shaka International due to air traffic congestion. At least 600 fans bound for the semifinal on Wednesday missed the game.

No tinkering for Spain coach

Spain coach Vicente del Bosque won't be doing much tinkering with the European champion's starting lineup for Sunday's World Cup final.

"We've kept a certain block of players in these six games, so I don't think there will be many changes," Del Bosque said Thursday.

Del Bosque fielded the same starting 11 for three straight games before replacing striker Fernando Torres with Pedro Rodriguez for Wednesday's 1-0 win over Germany in which Carles Puyol scored. Pedro excelled in his first start.

"We're very happy with Pedro's work. We wanted him to attack (defender Phillip) Lahm rather than defend," Del Bosque said.

Del Bosque said Spain will stick to the attractive style of soccer that has made it the favourite going into the match at Soccer City in Johannesburg, and that Torres is likely to feature in the final.

"If he's played the first five games it's because we believe he is in good physical shape," Del Bosque said.

Puyol was still enjoying what may be the most important goal of his career, only his third in 89 internationals.

"They are moments you must experience, especially as a player who isn't used to scoring and especially in such an important game," the defender said. "But you just want to stay focused after that because there is still a lot of game left."

The 32-year-old Puyol hasn't decided yet if the final will be his last match for Spain. He has been a regular since his international debut in 2000.

FIFA to review rules

FIFA will look at changing soccer's rules after a goal-line handball by Uruguay striker Luis Suarez denied Ghana a place in the World Cup semifinals.

FIFA president Sepp Blatter said Thursday that changes can be considered at an October meeting of its rules-making panel.

Suarez was shown a red card but his action provoked condemnation for being seen to unfairly keep his side in the match.

Ghana missed the ensuing penalty with the last kick and Uruguay won their quarter-final in a shootout.

A FIFA-imposed one-match ban for Suarez was then viewed as inadequate because he would have been eligible to play in the final. Uruguay lost to the Netherlands in the semifinals.

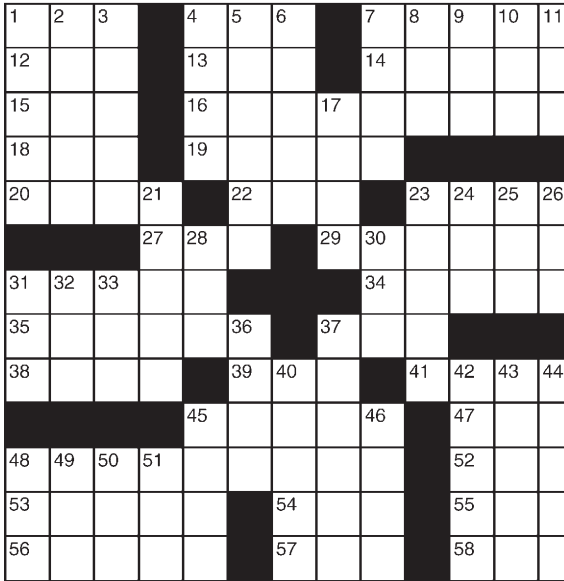

However, Blatter dismissed the possible creation of a rule to award "penalty goals" when handballs clearly prevented a score, likely limiting the panel's scope to review disciplinary sanctions.

Today's horoscope

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 Follow the rules today, no matter how much effort it might take. Either you do things by the book or a loved one or work colleague will end up throwing the book at you.

♉ Taurus April 23-May 21 Use your head when dealing with people who are likely to get emotional if they think you are picking on them. Use your own powers of persuasion to win them round to your side.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 Spell out what you mean in clear and simple language. If your instructions are too vague it is odds on that others will get the wrong end of the stick and, of course, they will end up blaming it on you.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 If you have made up your mind about something then your next step must be to just get on with it. Don't waste time wondering if it is the right decision — you make it right by acting on it.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 23 If you want to enjoy yourself this coming weekend then you need to clear the decks today. Identify what it is that needs to be done then do it.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24-Sept. 22 The harder you try to figure out what is going on in other people's heads the more confused you will be, so you might as well give up on it. A more important point is: what's going on in your head?
